2020-10-04 1:51:06 PM

Mostly seems to be a heterogenous collection all latest techniques in deep learning divided into several categories of network architecture stages including backbone, net and head good review of the latest techniques in each of these categories

Architectural choices seem to be entirely empirical and designed to allow training causing the GPU's and fast performance

Couple of new data augmentation techniques as well as new variations on existing regularization methods and activation functions are also used